GEMS NOTES

THE RARITY FACTORS & WORTH!

By Joseph M. Bissell

I've read a couple of articles in the last few months concerning Gem notes, and the philosophies of what's rare. I wrote an article last year on this very subject. That is, is a note rare because it's in Gem condition and also, which note seems to have a higher value (a rare Fr.# in low condition or a more common note in very high condition). I think its time to bring this subject up again and address even a few more issues.

Is a Gem note rare if there are 500 in Uncirculated, I believe the answer is YES! But, first let's break it down, and really see the intricacies of this question. The above question is deceiving (as are certain published charts). When someone says there's 500 notes in Unc. , is that the total for the type of note or for that exact Friedberg number (signature combination)? Either way, Yes, 500 unc's is rare when you're discussing a country with over 250 million people in it (not counting inter-country collectors). If there's 500 +/- unc's how many of them can attain gem status? Well, I went to our "Paper Money Population Reports" to attain

I'm Seeing STARS

...as are Price Levels!

By Rob Scolaro

I got started collecting Star notes about 5 years ago. I became interested in collecting star notes and paper money because of the vast varieties and especially the colors. Why STAR notes, "Well because I really noticed how rare they are in Gem condition, and the story behind stars fascinated me." I really began hitting ebay each and every night and found quite a few bargains, which still can be found today. it's definitely getting tougher and tougher now that the awareness level is peaking. I also check about 1/2 dozen websites each day in hopes of finding some rarities.

Here are some rare STAR notes I've come across over the years, some of which you can view at starnotes.biz

FR-1525* 1928 $5 Legal Tender in CGC-65
FR-1532* 1953 $5 Legal Tender in CGC-66
FR-1608* 1935A $1 Silver Certificate – MULE CGC65
FR-1609* 1935A $1 Silver Cert.-Experimental in 65
FR-2300* 1935A $1 Silver Cert. – HAWAII in CGC 66
FR-2306* 1935A $1 Silver Cert–North African CGC 68
FR-2309* 1934A $10 Silver Cert-North African CGC65

It so fun to collect Star notes by series, there are many inexpensive notes to procure, including in the Legal Tenders, Silver Certificates, and the Federal Reserves.

The prices in the latest edition (4th edition) of the "Small Size U.S. Paper Money" by Oakes and Schwartz have just soared on Star notes, I mean many of them have literally doubled and even tripled.

On thing I've noticed is that most of the real expensive that information and here's what I found. Using Chiefs as an example: there are eleven (11) Friedberg types (Fr.271 to 281) and I found there to be between 550 to 600 in Unc. Out of that pool, I located 18 denoted in Gem 65, six in Superb Gem 66, seven in Ultra Gem, and three in Premium Gem 68. That totals 34 in Gem, Yes, I'd call that RARE! Now, some dealers might ask "What does higher than a Superb Gem mean?" Or some may feel that a note that is perceived higher than a Superb Gem is worth no more than a Gem. Well, if this were true, I'd like for them to "Crack out" their Coins in 67 and 68 holders and sell them to me as mere Gems.....not going to happen!

LET'S TALK WORTH!

Academically (as long as I've been a college professor-over a decade for Masters level Finance, Accounting and Economics) and practically speaking, items (especially collectibles) are worth what the "Market Demand" yields. Period! No exceptions! An item is not worth more or less just because someone in an industry says it's not rare or its hype money! If a specific market or industry has an appreciation overall (in this case the collector base which drives this market-not the dealer base. Dealers sell what the collectors want, end of story) for a particular item and that demand is strong, prices will move in parallel. If collectors desire high graded currency (which they do) then that will push the prices up. This seems obvious, but oddly enough so people feel that either a gem is a gem or a collector is not astute or sophisticated if they don't want a rare note that only comes in Fine condition. I'm currently shopping for a 1927D three Star notes don't make it to ebay, notes around $5,000.

You can also find star notes offered by auction houses, the only possible snag there is you normally don't get to physically examine the note, which can be a huge draw back if the note is not professionally graded by a third party. This can also be the challenge in buying notes off of ebay. There have been so many instances that dealers and collectors have purchased notes off of an internet auction only to find out the note has been processed or falls far short of the "sales claims." Normally, your just out of luck (based on personal experiences and those in the paper money community), you can't get your money back and even worse, your stuck with note. I sell almost exclusively graded material, not only does it give the buyer a higher comfort level but it helps me sleep at night knowing a customer won't want to return a note because its not what they expected it to be.

Pricing: Really there's only two main sources to go to, the first (which I mentioned earlier) is the Oaks/Schwartz book which has a wealth of information on just about every issue. The only snag is the prices only go up to CU, and sometimes its two to four years in between issues and prices can become quite stale in that time frame. This publication (U.S. Price Guide) does list the prices above Cu, all the way to MS-68 and the information is fresh each month, but I would love to see even more space dedicated to Star Notes. If you'd like more information on Star Notes visit my website at Starnotes.biz and see my ad on page 12, Good Luck!

"PRICING, GRADING & POPULATION SUMMARY"

This is a "Retail Publication," and is designed to reflect current market prices. These prices are procured from many sources, including: Dealers, Internet auctions, previous auction houses "prices realized," striving to reflect current market prices. If the Note Type contains a range of Fr.#'s, then the listed price reflects the most common Fr.#. This publication is in NO way instructing or suggesting for its readers to purchase at these levels. Grading ranges from Very Good (MS 8) to Premium Gem (MS 68). The listed prices were gathered from both professionally graded and independently graded "sold" notes. We did denote the observation that prof. graded notes generally sold for higher prices than independently graded notes. A Population Summary column is listed for ea. Note Type, many times with a range of Fr.#'s. Example: Fr.#100-102 (1880 $10 Legal Tender) shows 24-6-38 in the Population column-meaning there are 24 notes in CU & up for Fr.#100, 6 notes (in CU & up) for Fr.#101 & 38 notes (in CU & up) for Fr.#102. If you see +++ there are likely more out there than reported.

Let's Talk

around $17k, but in PCGS 66 the price soars to around $26,000, that's a delta (%change) of a 53% increase. Is the Buffalo Nickel rare, I think not, but it's rare in this grade, there are only 3 (MS-66) reported with PCGS and there may even be a duplicate submission in that number. Is the dollar amount of the 66 over the 65 "Hype money" or inflated, most would agree absolutely not! It certainly doesn't mean a collector is unsophisticated because they don't want a "Rare Rag." Nationals are very rare, take a note off Alaska, I know a guy who gladly paid $10k years ago for an Alaska National that wasn't even in Good condition, that's ok. It's just a different spectrum of interest. Overall though, I'll step out and say (just my opinion) that the global collecting community is more interested (thus pushing demand higher) in High Graded Notes than in a rare note in poor condition. Jay Parrino once told me, I wouldn't buy another rare note regardless of its rarity level unless it hit at least Gem level, and the interest level (#of collectors) is just too shallow. I think its fun to collect both, I personally try to collect rare notes (by Friedberg number) in high grades, not easy, but I find it enjoyable and challenging. I do also like to collect more common notes in very high grades and I find that equally enjoyable. This hobby is about having fun, what's fun for one person may not be for another and I think you should do what YOU personally enjoy, while also keeping an eye on your collection in regards to its investment potential. It always seems to be wise to try to acquire items in great demand.

Finest Knowns: Who wants the finest known, I do! So do collectors in Coins and just about every other collectible if it's feasible. What is a Finest Known? Pretty obvious, it's the Finest Known note in that grade THAT IS KNOWN! Yes, there can be another one out there, yes it's possible, just not probable. I read articles written about being careful about buying a finest known, one could pop up, sure it could, and it's just not likely. In coins you have the same desires to collect the finest knowns, except the probability is much greater a coin will surface. But, the last time I looked I didn't see anything about a hoard of 1913 Nickels or 1927D St. Gaudens surfacing, and the prices for those coins in Finest Knowns are staggering.

How much more is it WORTH?: Jay Parrino once told me a story where he owned both the Finest and the second finest 1927D St. Gauden coin (only 1 point apart) and the finest known was over a Million dollars more than the second finest, and the buyer on the phone wouldn't even hear what he had to say in regards to selling the second finest coin (both graded by the same company). I've documented a plethora of sales where 66's sell for 1.5x times gem 65's, and 67's sell for an average of double Gem money, and 68's I've documented have sold for on average between 5 to 10 (in one case 30 times) Gem money. I just saw a $10 gold Indian (common date) coin at the Fun Show sell for $375k in a 69 holder, and it was well under $100k in a 68 holder, makes sense, Finest knowns are Rare! They are one of a kind until another item bumps it off, which may be Never.....

But Grading Opinions vary between people: Well, yes they do, and widely. Some sellers of a note may not want to deal in graded currency and here's a few reasons why (and I'm sure their not happy about me printing this): First, they'd like to buy your notes raw and convince you the note is over graded and that your note is only a Ch Cu note (when actually it's a Superb Gem or better), then when you walk away with your 64 money, they send it in to be graded and sell it to another dealer who deals in graded notes and he marks it up 5 times – to its real value. A second reason is some people sell bad notes, meaning the note is Au (with a pressed out fold, been bleached, processed) for Gem money. I personally answer the phone everyday and listen to peoples disappointment, it's very hard to hear. People don't buy expensive raw coins, they shouldn't buy raw currency unless their an expert, if they do, Grade it!

VERY IMPORTANT!

All Pricing Spreadsheets are reflective of C.G.C.
Product only!

These prices are the result of prices realized from sales of C.G.C. product, NOT raw notes and NOT notes in other slabbed holders!

You can NOT compare (realistically) C.G.C. prices realized with other notes (raw or graded by other companies) with similar expectations.

Recent EXAMPLES:

CGC –65 Bison sold for $5.5k, competitors 65 offered at $3.3k
CGC –66 Bison sold for $12.5k, competitors 65 offered at $6.5k
CGC – 65 $1 Ed (fr.224) sold for $3.5k, competitors 65 sold $2.2k
CGC – 65 Chief (same fr.#) sold $4.3k, competitors 65 sold $1.8k
CGC – 65 $500 '34a sold $4.2k, competitors 65 sold for $2.4k
CGC – 65 $1,000 '34a sold for $9.5k (ebay) competitors 65 $3.5k CGC – 65 1168 $10 GC sold $3.5k, competitors 65 sold for $1.8k
CGC – 65 $10 '28 Gold sold $1.9k, competitors 65 sold for $1k

(*examples go on endlessly, the point is not all grading services realize equal values (as in the coin industry), and figures should not used for raw or other slabbed product).
